

NAME CANDIDATES · RANKED, DOMAINS CONFIRMED

42 available .coms from 158 checked, every one with its .org free too | HGF Management Company | July 11, 2026

42 unregistered .com names for the program, best to worst, from 158 candidates checked live against the Verisign registry on July 11, 2026.

Prepared for Dennis Lanni | HGF Management Company | July 2026

Why this list exists

The INSITE name carries a live federal trademark registration by another company (Reg. 6610415, a Class 42 software mark held by Insite Software Solutions, Inc.) and the exact-match domain is held by others. The class differs from financial services, which softens but does not remove the risk, and the field of INSITE marks across classes is crowded. Question 1 already sends the current name to a trademark attorney; this memo gives Dennis the fallback bench so a rename, if needed, costs a decision instead of a scramble. Names echoing "site" were excluded by design, since anything in that family inherits the exact conflict this list exists to escape.

What "available" means here

Every name below returned "unregistered" from Verisign's authoritative .com registry (the RDAP service) at the moment of checking. That is a snapshot: any name can be registered by anyone at any time, and registrars may price a few as premium. The practical move is for Dennis to register his top two or three immediately (registration is cheap; losing the good one is not) and have the attorney run knockout searches before adopting any of them. Attorney clearance remains mandatory regardless of which name wins, exactly as question 1 already requires.

The .org companion check (added the same day)

All 158 candidates were rerun against the .org registry of record (Public Interest Registry's RDAP service, validated in both directions before use). 118 of the 158 are unregistered there, and the headline is unusually clean: every one of the 42 names above also has its .org free, all eight tier-one names included, so each finalist can be secured as a matched .com and .org pair for roughly the cost of lunch. Another 76 names are free only on .org because someone else owns the .com; a few are otherwise-strong names (ReadyLot, FirstLot, LotWorks, FeeBridge, LotSpring), but building a brand on an .org while a stranger operates the matching .com invites leaked traffic and confusion, so treat the org-only list as a curiosity rather than a bench. On which address should lead: SCIP's sponsor lives at a .org because it is a public joint powers authority, and HGF is a private administrator, so the honest and conventional play is the .com as the primary address with the .org registered defensively and redirected to it.

How they were judged

Five tests, in order of weight: does it sound credible to a city finance director and a bank (institutional weight); does it make sense standing next to "Development Impact Fee Financing Program" (clarity); does it survive being said once over the phone (spelling); does it collide with anyone (screened at the knowledge level, with web checks on the top three); and does it travel beyond California (breadth).

Tier one: present these to Dennis

1. FeeRoll (feeroll.com). The entire mechanism in two syllables: the fee goes on the tax roll. County officials and finance people hear their own vocabulary; developers get it instantly; nobody misspells it. Web screen: clean, nothing but a personal social-media handle.
2. TractRoll (tractroll.com). "Tract" is native California subdivision language, the word on every recorded final map, joined to the roll where the tax lives. Mechanism-true at home and legible everywhere else. Web screen: clean.
3. MuniRoll (muniroll.com). Municipal-finance shorthand plus the tax roll. The strongest name in the room when the room is issuers and capital partners.
4. MuniParcel (muniparcel.com). Institutional gravity attached to a concrete object. Reads like infrastructure, which is the brand promise.
5. TractReady (tractready.com). Finished-lot, ready-to-build energy in California tract vocabulary. The most benefit-forward of the credible names.
6. CivicLot (civiclott.com). Public-purpose warmth for council chambers and a friendly face on a homeowner's tax bill.
7. LandCarry (landcarry.com). Says the pitch itself: the land carries the fees, not the builder. Carries a flag: a Philadelphia real-estate group runs a "U.S. Land Carry Fund," and a Japanese logistics company owns the .co.jp, so the attorney's read matters more than usual here.

8. FeeCarry (feecarry.com). Names the exact cost the program removes, in the finance industry's own word for it.

Tier two: solid backups

1. TractFee (tractfee.com), plain and true, slightly flat.
10. GroundFee (groundfee.com), the fee rides the ground.
11. EvenLot (evenlot.com), levels the field for small lots, a good story.
12. LotCarry (lotcarry.com), LandCarry at parcel scale.
13. CivicFee (civicfee.com), public-purpose plain speech.
14. PlatReady (platready.com), lovely meaning, but "plat" is Midwest map vocabulary and California says "final map," so it under-lands at home.
15. GroundCarry (groundcarry.com), true but a mouthful.
16. SolidLot (solidlot.com), sturdy and generic.
17. MuniFee (munifee.com), clear, a little flat.
18. FirmLot (firmplot.com), sturdy and generic.
19. AnnexLine (annexline.com), mechanism-true since annexation is the operating motion, but "annex" reads territorial to laypeople.
20. LotStead (lotstead.com), homestead warmth, slightly quaint.

What was checked and how

Two generation waves produced 158 candidates across three angles: mechanism-literal names built from parcel, lot, tract, plat, roll, fee, and annex; benefit-forward names built from carry, ready, even, and ground; and institutional compounds on muni and civic. All 158 were queried one by one against Verisign's RDAP service, the registry of record for .com, where an unregistered domain answers with a distinctive not-found response. Sixty-seven first-wave and forty-nine second-wave names came back registered, including every bridge, spring, point, and works combination. The 42 above are the survivors. The top three by ranking were then web-screened for live commercial collisions, with results as noted.
